One story Commercial Style built on old east- west ally site. It is faced with medium-brown brick. The store front is 1950 style with display cases and metal fluting. The rear façade is built of common brick and has rectangular window openings filled with glass block.

1996 Application National Register of Historic Places

Tobkin's Jewelry is a one story Commercial Style structure which was built on the site of an east-west alley which originally bisected this side of the block. It is faced with medium-brown brick. The storefront has a circa 1950 facade with jewelry display cases and metal fluting. The rear facade is built of common brick and has rectangular window openings filled with glass block. The building was constructed for Tobkin's Jewelry which was owned by Eugene Tobkins and Bill Stewart. It later became Stewart's Jewelry. The business remained at this location until 1990.
